MITCHELL'S WITHDRAWAL Squire Jonathan called the meeting order. He stated that it held to hear the grievances of his race, and that he had sad news to convey to them, as Mitchell had decided to withdraw his name from the contest. The reason Mitchell had declined to carry their banner was that the District Committee had led them to the water's edge and then deserted them. Mitchell was introduced, and after reading his address amidst frequent ap-plause resumed his seat for a few inutes until, responsive to the request of the chairman, the audience could "chip in "and pay for the hall.

Martin Lapscomb, the old war-horse of the Republican party, as he was called, was invited to a seat upon the

that he was forced to admit that some of the head men of the Republican party were working to aid the Democrats. His "entermed friend Southward" had seen the wind-storm in the district, and sounded the trumpet of warning, but at

" SOUNE " THEIR BETRAYERS. Mitchell, after criticising the commit-tee, Waddill, and Mahone severely and at length, said that the only remedy now, after the negroes had been be-trayed, was to "souse their betrayers in cold water," and deprive them of the support of the colored people. These men were traitors and merited nothing but the bitterest hate.

The speaker said he did not use abusive language because he was a disap pointed office-seeker, but that the men who had betrayed them had to be de-

The motley, malodorous horde then creamed for Southward, and he arose, but said that tooth-ache hindered him from making a tong address. He did, however, manage to speak for some time and in a very denanciatory manner of the party managers.

"I never intend to support another candidate in Virginia," said the speaker. "who recognizes those who have robbed us in this election. Let us get a com-pact organization in this district that PAUL ROUGHLY HANDLED. "I have nothing to do with the action of the District Committee," he said, "and can't take their sins on my houlders. I have a family to support. In the course of his remarks l'aul was frequently jeered by the crowd, and although he said he knew that he had the love of the crowd, there was certainly no evidence of it.

The speaker said that he had "thrown away $30" to support the Planet, because he thought it would be beneficial to his race. This journal praised Mitchell, but he didn't know whether any other colored man got any praise

Mitchell was again "introduced" by Jonathan and said he was surprised at the remarks of Paul, which insimuated that he was a seoundrel. He came from a fighting stock and wanted an apology from Paul. The personal allusions made to him and the Planet were radically

At this point the enthusiasm of th crowd for Mitchell became almost wild, and cries of "Put Paul out" filled the hall. He was hustled about and a gen-eral row ensued. Had not a motion to adjourn been made and adopted the un-popular Captain would have unques-tionably been hustled forcibly out.
